

Dale Dorning hosts makeup master class

Celebrity hair and makeup artist, Dale Dorning teamed up with Latonas Professional Makeup Supplies in Brisbane to launch his series of Makeup Master Classes last May, in conjunction with the launch of his brand, PROOF Cosmetics, at Latonas.

Over four days, Dale hosted five classes sharing his expert tips and tricks on creating flawless red carpet looks, what to look for when working on photographic events, to capturing the ultimate beauty shot.

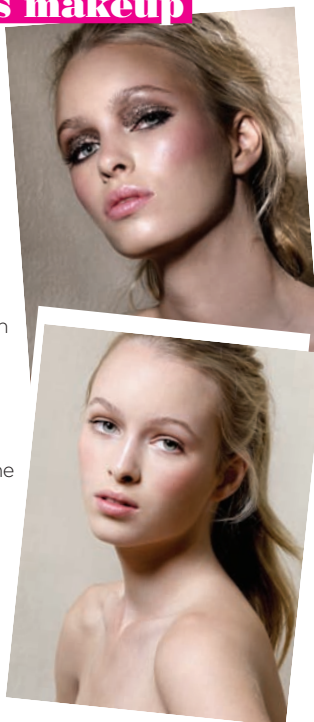

"There is a definite difference working with celebrities, and in particular the red carpet circuit, to working on clients in-salon; your work is really scrutinised as the camera sees everything," says Dale. "As a professional makeup artist you battle with the elements, camera flash and the harshness of daylight, and it's up to you to ensure your client looks flawless."

"My key tips will also assist artists in creating flawless bridal looks. I want to share my professional experience and help makeup artists give their clients, bridal or otherwise, the star treatment!" Dorning said.

Leading Queensland make-up artist Abigael Johnston has joined forces with director of Network Ten's hair and makeup department, Corrine Beasley, at Latonas in what was their first professional makeup event.

Johnston said: "We were extremely privileged to have Dale host our first master class event, which was a sell out. It's important to let our [peers] in Brisbane know that the best in our industry are accessible to Queensland makeup artists and not just those that reside in Sydney and Melbourne."

AACDS and The Lily Room join forces

Perth-based Registered Training Organisation, The Australasian Academy of Cosmetic Dermal Science (AACDS) and The Lily Room Cosmetic Medical Clinic in Sydney's Chatswood have joined forces to offer better practical training for AACDS students.

AACDS Medical Director Dr Jayson Oates, said: "We were specifically looking for a long-established medical practice with experienced dermal therapists to train our students."

Selina Schiedel, practical trainer and director of The Lily Room, said: "I'm pleased to put my ten years worth of clinical experience in dermal therapies and cosmetic medicine and surgery towards training other professionals in this dynamic and rewarding field."

The practical training component encompasses competencies in microdermabrasion, superficial Jessners and TCA peels, IPL photo rejuvenation and hair reduction and now fractional resurfacing using the Fraxel Re:Fine system. Registered nurses can also undertake training in dermal fillers and wrinkle relaxers.

Medically supervised, hands-on practical training is paramount for AACDS to ensure students graduate with readily employable skills as required by the industry. Dr Mary Dingley, President of the Cosmetic Physicians Society of Australasia said: "We're so pleased to finally have a course that provides doctors with pre-trained and qualified dermal therapists. This significantly reduces time spent on in-office training."

AACDS Director and practical trainer, April Jorgensen added: "The delivery of dermal therapy practical training must entail students having exclusivity to their own patient, treatment bed and equipment. Group training or just work experience simply does not ensure competency in each dermal therapy procedure."

All AACDS trainers and assessors are actively involved in the industry, providing dermal therapies and aspects of cosmetic medicine at Perth's largest cosmetic medical day hospital and one of Sydney's premier cosmetic medical clinics.

AACDS offers a fully flexible learning approach, including online study.
